Senate Votes to Try Trump Over Capitol Riot

Trial to Proceed, but Trump May Have Enough Votes for Acquittal

- The Senate reached a 56-44 vote on Day 1 of the impeachment trial, which opened with a harrowing video of the Capitol attack.
- Only six Republicans joined Democrats in clearing the way for the case to be heard, another indication that former President Trump is all but certain to be acquitted.

House impeachment managers and former President Trump's defense team unveiled their opposing arguments for his second impeachment trial. Maya Blackstone

The G.O.P. Senators Who Voted to Proceed With Trump's Trial

The result largely mirrored a vote last month over the constitutionality of the trial.

Here are five takeaways from the first day of the proceedings.

Analysis: The First Trial Seemed Abstract. This One Is Anything But.

At issue will be many aspects that defined Donald Trump's presidency: his assaults on truth, his fomenting of divisions, and his undermining of an election.

Raskin Tears Up as He Paints a Picture Of Capitol Siege's Fury

Representative Jamie Raskin, the lead prosecution lawyer in former President Trump's second impeachment trial, spoke of seeing terrified colleagues.

Meandering Performance by Defense Lawyers Enrages Trump

Former President Trump was particularly angry at Bruce Castor for acknowledging the effectiveness of the House Democrats' presentation.

Trifecta of Roles for Leahy: Witness, Juror and Judge

It has fallen to Patrick Leahy, the 80-year-old Vermont Democrat and longest-serving senator, to preside over the trial.

Americans support convicting former President Trump on an impeachment charge, but only by a slender margin.

California, Besieged by Virus for Months, Has Most Deaths in U.S.

- Averaging 500 daily deaths over the past week, California surpassed New York as the state with the largest number of total coronavirus deaths.
- The U.S. is nearing President Biden's goal of 100,000 daily tests.
